ENGAGE AND APPLY the Sunday SERMON. Round table discussion led by Elder Jane Capo during Fellowship Hour immediately following the service. It will last maybe ten minutes, or twenty, or? A First Presbyterian Lent 2025 Special.

1st HYMN NOTE: Beginning with stanza 7, “O For a Thousand Tongues to Sing” has traditionally been the opening hymn in Methodist hymnals throughout the world since the time of Wesley’s Collection of Hymns for the Use of the People Called Methodists (1780). The number of stanzas tends to vary, but the complete eighteen (seventeen of which are included in No. 58) seem never to have been used as a hymn, and the poem’s original content is little known. It was written in 1739 by Charles Wesley to commemorate his conversion on May 21, 1738, and was published in Hymns and Sacred Poems (1740) with the title “For the Anniversary Day of One’s Conversion.” The first six stanzas deal with Wesley’s own emotions upon his spiritual transformation. The climactic stanza, however, is apparently an echo of an expression used by Peter Bohler: “Had I a thousand tongues, I would praise him with them all!” This itself may have been a reminiscence of a hymn by Johann Mentzer (1658-1734) which was published in Freylinghausen’s Gesangbuch (1704), beginning with same words in German: “O dass ich tausend Zungen hütte.”
